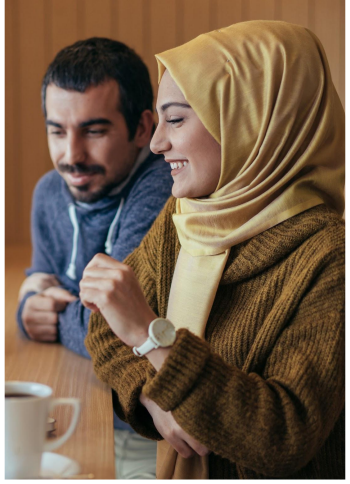
SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAMME GUIDE 2022

The 30% Club in conjunction with Ireland's top learning institutions offer a suite of scholarships in a variety of fields, to better equip future female leaders.



30% CLUB IRELAND 2022 EXECUTIVE EDUCATION SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAMME

Gillian Harford
Country Executive for 30% Club Ireland

The 30% Club Ireland is proud to be launching our Executive Education Scholarship Programme for its eighth consecutive year. Because of the support and generosity of higher level institutions across Ireland, the programme has provided over 100 professional women with scholarships to pursue executive education in their chosen field. We are proud of the accomplishment of all our alumni, and the vast impact they are making across the fields of Business, STEM, and Healthcare. These women are influencing the drive to achieve better gender balance on boards, and within executive leadership.

To the next generation of scholarship recipients: You are about to make an empowering decision to expand your education. We welcome you into the 30% Club network, and we can't wait to see what you achieve. We're here to support you.

For further information on the Executive Education Scholarship Programme, please contact:

ie_30club_scholarships@pwc.com

Women make up 53% of the students graduating from third level education in Ireland, with a quarter of those students studying business, administration and law.

Yet we know that the numbers of women moving on to post graduate and executive education is not keeping pace with representation levels at third level. Global research by the Financial Times indicates some progress is being made, with enrollment levels for women on full-time MBA programmes up from 17% in 2007 to 31% in 2021 – but more progress is needed.

At the same time, while we have seen an increase in the percentage of women on boards of Irish companies, progress at c-suite, critical for pipeline, lags behind. The European Women on Boards 2021 report showed a rate of just 20% female representation at c-suite for Irish listed organisations. Similar data is available in the fourth Balance for Better Business report (Nov 2021) which shows steady but slow progress across ISEQ 20, Private and Multinational employers in Ireland.

At the 30% Club we believe very strongly in the view that executive education is an important support for career progression into senior roles, for men and women. We also support the view that diversity in the executive classroom is just as important in delivering better outcomes, as diversity in the workplace.

That's why the 30% Club has established partnerships with a number of learning institutions to address the under-representation of women pursuing post-graduate management education, by offering scholarships aimed at women.

Through these partnerships, we seek to build a continuum of change, highlighting the impact of executive education in accelerating career development and helping women, like you, to decide to undertake further education.

TIPS FROM OUR ALUMNI

TALK TO YOUR EMPLOYER

The most important thing you need to do is talk about your intentions with your team lead – it is very likely that you will need to manage the course, and course requirements, around your day job. You should also let your colleagues know – you'll be glad of the support that a team can bring!

Essential things to consider and discuss are:

- How the course can fit into your personal career development plan, and your future with the organisation.
- The demands of the programme, especially if there are classes during standard working hours or away days, and how you can work together to make this happen more effectively. Does your organisation have an agile working policy where you can flex start/finish times, or work remotely at times to support class attendance?
- If a scholarship is for 50% of the fees, is there a matching option for the balance? Ask your HR team.
- What flexibility / support is available for exam leave.
- Are there any opportunities to use work items as case studies for projects or learning?

PICK THE RIGHT COURSE

There are a range of options to choose from, so think about what is right for you – not just today, but think about long term benefits. Are you a specialist that would benefit from a more generalist programme like an MBA; are you a specialist that would like a deeper understanding of a topic such as healthcare or STEM; are you planning to remain in the private sector or the public sector; will this programme stretch you sufficiently for long term benefit. Most importantly, is this a programme that better prepares you for a leadership role.

TALK TO THE COLLEGE

Typically each programme has a course coordinator, and they can be very useful contacts for understanding more about the curriculum, the 'real' work schedule, the flexibility and requirements around attendance. They can also be a great resource for alumni referrals if you'd like to talk to someone who has done the course previously, especially if you would like to talk to someone about how they managed the balance of course work and a full-time job.

GET THE BALANCE RIGHT

Taking on further education, particularly when focusing on your career, can feel daunting and conjures up visions of the most expensive time management course you will ever undertake! So tap into every support that you can get. Talk to friends and family and don't be afraid to ask for help and support on the practicalities and don't turn down offers of help. Former scholarship winners are also great resources to tap into, so check on website links to see if they are featured and available to chat.

This is not a time where you have to be Superwoman to be a super woman – think about things you can 'let go' of temporarily to free up more time and remember it's only for a year or two in what is hopefully a long and successful career.

UL EXECUTIVE MBA

ABOUT US

In the top 1% of elite business schools globally, University of Limerick's Executive MBA programme is accredited by AMBA, AACSB and EQUIS providing students with a first-rate, future-focused business education. Designed to develop confident, strategic and internationally focused leaders, UL's MBA equips executives with essential skills to navigate successfully in today's uncertain world. This two-year, part-time course is structured to challenge strategic thinking processes, enhance communication skills, improve decision-making and critical thinking, helping to transform executives into resilient leaders equipped with the skills to excel in a fast changing world. The course is delivered in the format of monthly three-day blocks, which are scheduled in advance, and is a popular choice with busy professionals. Five key themes shape the programme: internationalisation; managerial vision and competencies; entrepreneurship and innovation; strategic thinking; and leadership. Specialist elective modules further tailor the course to participants' career goals. Challenging content, high-calibre lecturers and accomplished peers combine to help participants learn, reflect, debate and grow.

THE SCHOLARSHIP

From its inception, the University of Limerick has forged deep relationships with industry. The 30% Club Scholarships are designed to strengthen those business relationships, and support greater gender balance in the executive classroom and in senior roles. The college offers 3 scholarships on the MBA programme, each of which is valued at 1/3 of the college tuition fee over the two year cycle.
