

30% CLUB EXECUTIVE EDUCATION IRELAND SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAMME GUIDE - 2024

The 30% Club in conjunction with Ireland's top learning institutions offer a suite of scholarships in a variety of fields, to better equip future female leaders.

In partnership with

30% CLUB IRELAND 2024 EXECUTIVE EDUCATION SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAMME

Gillian Harford

Country Executive for 30% Club Ireland

The 30% Club Ireland is proud to be launching our 10th Annual Executive Education Scholarship Programme. Through the generosity of higher-level institutions across Ireland, the programme has already supported more than 150 women in enhancing their professional career development. The 2024 programme includes even more topical areas, including Artificial Intelligence, Sustainability and Cybersecurity. It now also includes virtual programmes which open opportunities to more women beyond our major cities, or who work in a more agile way.

We are proud of the accomplishment of all our alumni, and the vast impact they are making across the fields of Business, STEM, and Healthcare. These women are influencing the drive to achieve better gender balance at senior decision-making tables across Ireland, for better business outcomes.

To the next generation of scholarship recipients: You are about to make an empowering decision to expand your education. We welcome you into the 30% Club network, and we can't wait to see what you achieve.

For further information on the Executive Education Scholarship Programme, please contact:

Women make up 54.5% of the students graduating from third level education in Ireland, with a fifth of those students studying business, administration and law.

Yet we know that the numbers of women moving on to post graduate and executive education is not keeping pace with representation levels at third level.

This increase is mirrored when we look at women in business with "49% of females ... have said their skills and knowledge in terms of starting a business has increased - that's up from 39% in 2018," said Breege Cosgrave, chair of National Women's Enterprise Day. "At the moment we're showing the third highest level of female entrepreneurship start-ups across Europe".

At the same time, while we have seen an increase in the percentage of women on boards of Irish companies, progress at c-suite lags behind.

At the 30% Club we believe very strongly in the view that executive education is an important support for career progression into senior roles, for men and women. We also support the view that diversity in the executive classroom is just as important in delivering better outcomes, as diversity in the workplace.

That's why the 30% Club has established partnerships with a number of learning institutions to address the under-representation of women pursuing post-graduate management education, by offering scholarships aimed at women.

Through these partnerships, we seek to build a continuum of change, highlighting the impact of executive education in accelerating career development and helping women, like you, to decide to undertake further education.

TIPS FROM OUR ALUMNI

TALK TO YOUR EMPLOYER

The most important thing you need to do is talk about your intentions with your team lead – it is very likely that you will need to manage the course, and course requirements, around your day job. You should also let your colleagues know – you'll be glad of the support that a team can bring!

Essential things to consider and discuss are:

- How the course can fit into your personal career development plan, and your future with the organisation.
- The demands of the programme, especially if there are classes during standard working hours or away days, and how you can work together to make this happen more effectively. Does your organisation have an agile working policy where you can flex start/finish times, or work remotely at times to support class attendance?
- If a scholarship is for 50% of the fees, is there a matching option for the balance? Ask your HR team.
- What flexibility / support is available for exam leave.
- Are there any opportunities to use work items as case studies for projects or learning?

PICK THE RIGHT COURSE

There are a range of options to choose from, so think about what is right for you – not just today, but think about long term benefits. Are you a specialist that would benefit from a more generalist programme like an MBA; are you a specialist that would like a deeper understanding of a topic such as healthcare or STEM; are you planning to remain in the private sector or the public sector; will this programme stretch you sufficiently for long term benefit. Most importantly, is this a programme that better prepares you for a leadership role.

TALK TO THE COLLEGE

Typically each programme has a course coordinator, and they can be very useful contacts for understanding more about the curriculum, the 'real' work schedule, the flexibility and requirements around attendance. They can also be a great resource for alumni referrals if you'd like to talk to someone who has done the course previously, especially if you would like to talk to someone about how they managed the balance of course work and a full-time job.

GET THE BALANCE RIGHT

Taking on further education, particularly when focusing on your career, can feel daunting and conjures up visions of the most expensive time management course you will ever undertake! So tap into every support that you can get. Talk to friends and family and don't be afraid to ask for help and support on the practicalities and don't turn down offers of help. Former scholarship winners are also great resources to tap into, so check on website links to see if they are featured and available to chat.

This is not a time where you have to be Superwoman to be a super woman – think about things you can 'let go' of temporarily to free up more time and remember it's only for a year or two in what is hopefully a long and successful career.
